ELECTION IN BLOOMFIELD.

Republicans Make a Clean Sweep. Democrats Out of Sight.

The election on Tuesday in Bloomfield was an unusually quiet one. The Democratic circular published in both of the local papers had the effect of bringing out a few more Republican votes than there would have been without it. The Republicans were in perfect harmony, well organized and wore a confident air of victory. The Democrats were not so happy and there was a funereal air about them that was prophetic of defeat.

The total vote in the township last spring for Committeeman-at-large was 960, and this spring it was 1162, divided as follows: First Ward, 342, Second Ward, 357; Third Ward, 463.

There was some scratching done, as usual, some people apparently taking a special delight in running their pencil very violently over the name of a candidate not to their liking. The large majority obtained by George Peterson, Assessor for the Third Ward, is phenomenal and shows what quiet work will accomplish. Upon the basis of one delegate for every fifteen votes for the Republican Committeeman-at-large, the First Ward in the next convention will have sixteen delegates, the Second Ward sixteen, and the Third Ward will have nineteen. The First Ward loses five, the Second three, and the Third seven delegates. Last year there was but one candidate for Committeeman-at-large, and that swelled the number of delegates. The following are the results of the election here:

Central Building.

ENTERPRISE OF HARRIS BROS.

The building in course of erection at the Centre for Harris Brothers will when finished meet a want that has long been felt in Bloomfield. The building will be forty feet wide and one hundred feet deep, and the front will be of old gold brick, presenting a handsome appearance. It will be surmounted by a highly ornamented cornice on which will appear "Central Building." The structure will have an elevation of almost seventy-five feet and will present a very imposing appearance. On the side next to Baker's store on the ground floor will be the entrance to the Hall and Lodge-rooms up stairs; next will come Harris Bros.' warerooms which will occupy a space of twenty feet by one hundred for the "Bloomfield Bee Hive." There will be another store for rental, size fourteen by seventy feet. In the rear of this store will be commodius dressing rooms which will connect by a private stairway with the stage on the floor above.

The second floor will be fitted up as a first class concert hall with a seating capacity of 650, which can be increased to 900 should occasion require it. It will have a stage 20 by 40 feet, which will be large enough for theatrical exhibitions.

On the third floor there will be one lodge room 50 by 25 feet and another lodge room 22 by 37 feet. Each will have two ante-rooms connected, with ladies' and gentlemen's dressing rooms. For the convenience of those using the lodge rooms there will be a kitchen fitted up with range, etc. A dumb waiter will connect with the concert hall.

All the rooms will be well lighted and ventilated, the lodge rooms having large skylights. The building will be strongly braced with iron girders and everything will be done not only to make the building safe but comfortable in all seasons. It will be heated throughout by steam and there will be a rear exit which can be used if occasion requires.

Applications have already been made for the lodge rooms.

Mountainside Hospital.

Editor Bloomfield Record.

Will you allow me to make known through your columns a few facts concerning the Mountainside Hospital which seem occasionally to be misunderstood by some of our friends?

As to payment of board by patients, the hospital is intended for the care and cure of those who are not able to receive proper attendance otherwise, and it is gladly offered to such without any charge.

If, however, those persons who come to us are able to pay something toward their expenses, we feel it to be only right that they should do so.

As an evidence of this allow me to give the following figures:

| | |
|---|---|
| Patients since opening, | 231 |
| Out patients, | 95 |
| Total, | 326 |
| Patients paying board, | 53 |
| Patients free, | 273 |

The board paid by these patients has been in amount about one-seventh of the actual running expenses. There have been instances where board has been paid, and upon facts being learned as to the circumstances of the patient, the money has been returned to them.

Upon the completion of the new building there will be four rooms for private patients on the second floor, of good size, light and airy. Two of these will be fully furnished by friends of the cause, and every comfort will be supplied.

For these a payment of ten to fifteen dollars per week will include board and attendance.

We should like to give a word of explanation as to pastoral visitation.

The year is divided between the pastors of Montclair, Bloomfield and Glen Ridge. If, however, any patients prefer the visits of their own pastor they are at perfect liberty to receive them.

It is understood by Fathers Mendle and Nardiello that they will be sent for whenever the sick of their churches desire their attendance, and the matron has instructions to see that this is done.

The number of patients received now is being reduced as much as possible to those who need immediate care, preparatory to the removal to the new building which is approaching completion.

During this time the corps of nurses is relieved from the usual pressure of work, and unless some sudden emergency arises one could be spared for outside nursing.

The rate for this would be fifteen dollars per week.

Very truly,
A. T. STRONG, Pres.

Orchestral Concert at Union Hall.

The grand orchestral concert given under the direction of Chas. N. Parker on Tuesday night in Union Hall was well received by the public. The hall was very well filled and that was encouraging to those who appeared. Mr. Sydney Durham, the tenor solo who had the third number on the programme was obliged to return after singing that, on account of illness. The cornet solo was vigorously encored, as was also the value "Love's Devotion," composed by Mr. Parker and played by the orchestra. The violin solo by Mr. Carl Hugo Engel gave very much delight to the audience, who showed their pleasure by demanding more. Mr. Parker was assisted by Mr. Sydney Durham, tenor; Miss M. R. Radcliff, soprano; Mr. Louis E. Bliss, cornetist; Mr. Carl Engel, violinist; and Mrs. Wm. Holt, accompanist. Mr. Parker was successful in arranging a very pleasant programme of music which was artistically rendered by those who assisted him.

Ten Nights in a Bar-room.

Ten Nights in a Bar-room was given by the Young Men's Catholic Union in Union Hall last night to a large audience. While this play has been given several times here, it was so well mounted and each character so carefully studied and brought out by those who took part, it was received with very hearty plaudits. Very much credit is due to John F. Dillon, who was general director, and to those who took the principal parts. Little Mamie Senior as Joe Morgan's daughter did remarkably well for one so young. Chas. Durning as a sample of a Yankee who never was sober was very amusing. P. J. Quinn as the "Drunkard Morgan" vividly portrayed the character. Jos. Durr as "Sam Slade the Inn keeper" showed that he knew how to keep a hotel. Miss Teresa Quinn, Miss Nellie Kelly, and Miss Minnie Kelly were deserving of special mention.

Church Notes.

Last Sunday was an important one with many of the churches, celebrating birthdays, as it were. Westminster Presbyterian Church emphasized the fact of its being just one year since they entered the beautiful edifice now occupied by them with appropriate exercises and an anniversary sermon by their pastor, Rev. Geo. A. Paull. An annual report was read which stated that thirty-six new names had been added to the church roll, one had died and seven had letters of dismissal to other churches, leaving a net game of twenty-eight; the total membership being three hundred and thirty-eight. During the year nearly $4,000 had been raised for benevolent purposes. Pew rentals, etc., had yielded a revenue of $6,695.11. A collection was taken which was sufficient to wipe out the floating debt of the church.

In the evening the Union Evangelical services were held in Westminster Church which was crowded. The pastors of the several churches were present and took part in the exercises. These services are popular with church members and the congregational singing which is a particular feature of these meetings lends an interest to them.

The First Baptist Church, Rev. C. A. Cook pastor, on Sunday morning celebrated the fifth anniversary of his pastorate with them. Mr. Cook preached an eloquent sermon which was retrospective, going over the events since his career began as pastor. The church has been quite prosperous financially having erected its borders and built a Sunday school room which has not its equal in Bloomfield for convenience and available space. The spiritual condition has also been good, members being added to the Church while the Sunday School is growing in numbers under the fostering care of the pastor and superintendent.

The Glen Ridge Congregational Church held their special services on Sunday afternoon. This was a church birthday party, it being five years since the Congregational Church at Glen Ridge was organized. The pastor, Rev. Frank J. Goodwin, presided and felt very much pleased with the progress the society had made since its organization. The exercises were of a very interesting character with selections of music rendered by the choir and addresses by Rev. Wm. Hayes Ward of New York, Rev. Chas. Savage, Orange, Rev. A. H. Bradford, Montclair and Rev. C. A. Cook of Bloomfield.

The Fiske Lectures.

The attention of the public is called to the course of lectures on American History, to be given by P. of. John Fiske, of Cambridge, Mass. The course which had been arranged for March was necessarily postponed until the evenings of April 18th and 25th and May 2d. The lectures will be given in the Montclair Club Hall. People have seldom had an opportunity to hear a man of equal distinction on a subject of which he is the acknowledged leader. The three lectures embrace the period between the American Revolution and the Civil War. The first lecture on Thos Jefferson will give the growth of the Democratic ideal on American soil, and the two succeeding lectures on Andrew Jackson will show something of the displacement of these ideals by conditions peculiarly American.

The ladies who have arranged for this course of lectures hope that the public will appreciate the very moderate rate at which the tickets are sold, and do everything in their power to further an interest in these lectures. Those who have already purchased tickets, may exchange them for reserved seats at Madison's Bookstore, Montclair, where tickets may be purchased. The course tickets, including reserved seats, are $1.50. Single tickets, fifty cents.

Charity Brightens Their Honeymoon.

Councilman John McWaters and Mr. Charley Jones had perhaps the rarest experience of any of the gentlemen who were engaged in the work of distributing help to the poor. Sunday afternoon these two gentlemen had charge of a wagon together, and many loads of provisions and clothing did they deliver to deserving poor. The name of John Jones of 56 McDonnell street was given them, and they started for the place. They had some difficulty in finding the number designated and inquired of some one near by where they could find 56.

"It's rite down dere," said a youth, pointin' toward the place, "an if you fellers will hurry up you'll see a weddin, cause John Jones is gettin tied up terday."

They stopped in front of 56, and John Jones, a white man who follows the occupation of carpenter, came out. He was not richly dressed, but he was not on the extreme ragged edge by any means.

"What about getting married, John?" asked Mr. Jones.

"I've been a-thinkin about it," replied Mr. John Jones, "an I'm mighty glad to see you people come, 'cause I need help."

Mr. McWaters and Mr. Jones delivered a liberal allowance of provisions to the groom, and after they had done so he said:

"Gentlemens, if you had been here about 10 minutes sooner you could have been at the weddin. I got married before you drove up."

The two dispensers of charity offered their congratulations.—

Death From a Barber's Razor.

The death of Mr. John Terry of Rector street from a malady brought on by a slight cut in the face which he got while being shaved ought to be an admonishment to barbers. The wound inflicted by the razor in the barber's hand was very slight, but it was the means of admitting into Mr. Terry's system some baneful substance, which may have been in the lather, or on brush, sponge or towel, or on the barber's hand. The result was blood poisoning, from which he died in a week after he had been cut

"OH, MOTHER."

"Oh, mother, I want my bonnet tied!"
"My hat has lost a string!"
"Must I be Bobby Barnes' horse?"
"Is sis your pretty wing?"
"Say, will you make us chicken pie?"
"Somebody's had my slate!"
"See what an ugly rent, mamma;
I tored it on the gate!"

"Oh, mother, Mamie's coming in,
With Moll and Bess and Fred;
Can we have cream and cake tonight,
And send the boys to bed?"
"Dear mother, may I wear your shawl?
I'm going for a drive.
If Charley should propose, mamma,
May I ask him in at five?"

"Oh, mother, send those children out,
They make such fearful din!
I've got my sermon well about
As far as 'What is sin?'
And can't you bear in mind that cup
Or string or tea for my head,
And mix a few light rolls and bake?
You know I hate cold bread."

Oh, mother, mother, should you cease
One little hour the care
That day by day your life must bear,
For this dear brood you bear,
It seems the wheels of life must stop,
Rich mother love! It springs,
A free, sweet fountain, and it lends
The commonest duty wings.
—Estelle Thomson in Home Magazine.

A Little For Baby.

A novel and pretty baby rattle is made of four yards of cap wire, half a yard of ribbon, nine bells, a strip of sateen, some cotton wool and a short length of macrame twine. Commence with folding the wire into four and bend it into the shape of a racket; over this wind the cotton wool, then bind the whole all round to make it neat. Now take the macrame twine and thread it across each way to form the network in the centre. Procure one ounce of double Berlin wool of a pretty color, and crochet over the edges of the racket, with four double crochet in each space between the network. Work round the edge again with one double crochet in every other stitch; fasten off.

For the handle work three chain, eight double crochet into loop, two double crochet into each of eight double, and continue working one double crochet into each of 16 stitches until a sufficiently large piece for the handle is worked, slip it over the handle and sew it to the other part of the crochet work, tie a bow of ribbon to hide where it is sewn, and sew the nine bells at regular intervals all round the racket. Make a ball by working double crochet round and round until it is the desired size, then decrease it by taking two double together. Stuff it with cotton wool and sew it to the network of the racket.—Brookly Chronicle.

Cooking Steaks and Chops.

A steak or a brace of chops must be well trimmed. Some fat is always left on the beefsteak unless it is a tenderloin; but the chops should be trimmed quite free of all suspicion of tallow. They should be placed on the gridiron over bright glowing coals, first on one side and then the other, to sear over the surface. Then should be raised from the fire about three or four inches. They must be turned every two minutes. When a steak and a half thick has cooked 12 minutes, it will usually be ready to serve. Every time a drop of fat falls into the fire the steak must be lifted up to allow the blaze to pass off. If the dampers are all turned on, as they should be in broiling, this will take but an instant. Beefsteak and mutton chops are always improved by rubbing them with a little sweet oil, seasoning them with salt and pepper and dusting them with flour before they are cooked. Nothing shows so quickly refinement in matters of the table as the proper cooking of simple dishes.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

About Having the Last Word.

A young girl once heard a bit of wisdom from the lips of a very aged woman—a woman who had rounded the full term of 90 years, and with eyes still bright and clear looked out upon the inrolling waters of eternity. The girl was impressed by the emphasis with which the venerable dame said to her, "Bessie, never insist on having the last word." The determination to have the final word leads to more quarrels and more bitterness of feeling at home than almost anything else in domestic life.

The fact is that one may so control her tongue and her eyes that she may allow her opponent the pleasure of this coveted concluding thrust and yet placidly retain her own opinion, and in the homely colloquial parlance of the up country, where one finds strong willed people living together in great peace with the most pronounced diversity of characteristics, "do as she's a mind to."—Harper's Bazar.

A Wrap For the Sickroom.

An invaluable wrap for a convalescent is the nightingale house sack. It is easily slipped on and over a nightdress and also adjusts itself to fit the figure closely, affording ample protection. The making of these useful garments is a simple matter. Hem the ends of 2¼ yards of elder down flannel or French flannel; fold in half and take a plait deep enough to form a pointed hood; sew a bow here and strings in front to confine it at the neck; fasten each end together for about two inches to make loose sleeves. One seen recently was made of cream white flannel, and pieces of old rose quilted silk had been laid over neck and sleeves to form a broad collar and cuff effect. This treatment, however, is not necessary, the garment being quite complete without it.—New York Times.

A Game For an Evening.

"I Love My Love With an A" is a new game, and all the fun depends upon its being kept up briskly. Any player who requires time to think should be called off. One begins: "I love my love with an A because he is able. I hate him with an A because he is abject. He took me to the sign of the 'Antic' and treated me to artichokes and absinthe." The next continues: "I love my love with a B because he is bankrupt. I hate him with a B because he is bald. He took me to the sign of the 'Bachelor' and treated me to biscuits and bananas." So the game goes on through all the letters of the alphabet, although the unfortunate "X" must be ruled out, and "Z" and "Y" will be found almost as impossible.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Popularity of Fur.

Next to velvet, fur, fur, fur. Fur for the edges of skirts, fur for bands—two, three and four—around the skirt, fur on the bodice, to edge all the berthas and falls and lambrequin effects; fur for hats, fur for midwinter parasols, which are of course carried only to sport the fur; fur everywhere, on cloth, on silk, in the street, in the ballroom, in the boudoir and, fashion hints, even in bed.

A white silk nightrobe—nay, let us be respectful—slumber robe, dream dress, drowse drapery, all cozy with soft lamb's wool. Think of that! No matter what your dress or what material, or for what occasion, you cannot go wrong if you put fur on it.—Boston Courier.

FARM·FIELD AND GARDEN

WHERE TO PUT FERTILIZERS.

Are the Best Results From Broadcast Sowing or by Drilling?

Following are opinions expressed by progressive farmers in communications made to Rural New Yorker:

N. D. Platt, Connecticut, writes: "It has been my practice to broadcast half my fertilizers and drill the other half. I think it better to use some in the drill to give the crop an early start and push it ahead as vigorously as possible before the insects, etc., appear. I always apply my fertilizer by hand. I would apply the fertilizer and plant the crop, after plowing, as soon as the soil was in suitable condition. I do not think it would pay to either moisten the fertilizer or to mix it with loam before using it."

Woodnutt Pettit says: "I should decidedly drill for wheat, the advantages being, so far as my experience goes, as two to one in its favor. As to potatoes, I have not had sufficient experience to give a well grounded opinion as to whether it would be well to drill or not. My plan has been to use about 500 pounds of high grade fertilizer in the furrow I plant in per acre, and this has given satisfactory results. My experience for corn is that 60 pounds of fertilizer applied in the hill always give the plants a good send-off, making after cultivation much more convenient and increasing the crop, but on poor land much more fertilizer will be needed, and it should be applied broadcast in addition to what has been drilled in."

D. C. Lewis, New Jersey, explained his practice as follows: "I have practiced both plans on the same crop. I have broadcasted entirely and have applied all in the row at the time of planting. In consequence of the blight striking the potato crop I now apply about half the fertilizer at the time of planting and the other half as soon as the potatoes are large enough to be cultivated. I believe this plan gives the crop a better start and enables me to cultivate sooner, and hence induces a quicker growth. In this locality we have three different machines for applying fertilizers, and all do good work. Mine is distributed at the time of planting by the Aspinwall planter. If I applied the fertilizer broadcast, I would do so at the time when preparing the ground for planting and apply all before planting. I prefer that fertilizers should be dry at all times and under all circumstances."

Dennis Finn, New Jersey, said: "I get the best results by drilling in the fertilizers for all kinds of crops. For potatoes I spread to prevent any loss of nitrogen which might occur. Then I would also get the benefit of the phosphoric acid contained in it rather than eliminate any. Very fine ground bone or pulverized tankage might be moistened, but not enough to produce heat."

Mr. Merwin, Connecticut, writes: "In case of all crops that send their feeders a good distance from the plants we recommend a broadcasting. Potatoes being a quick growing crop and a searcher for plant food within quite a limited area must have quick access to food to yield the best results; hence we largely drill."

The Busy Bee In Spring.

Spring is the best time to invest money in bees. All danger of losing them during the winter is passed. If it is a good season, the money paid out may be refunded in honey and swarms, writes an Ohio apiarian in The Farm Journal. He says: In making a selection of bees, unless you wish to become a fancier beeman, do not allow yourself to be "mashed" with very yellow banded bees. Beauty in bees, as we formerly observed, is very much like the beauty of the human form; as a general thing, it is only skin deep. We have invariably found that the dark, leathery Italians are the best workers and of course the most successful honey gatherers. In making a purchase be sure your hives are full of bees with just a sufficiency of honey to reach the last of May or the middle of June. Better have hives full of bees than those full of honey with but few bees. The queens in such hives may be dead, or, if alive, old and deficient in fertility. The fewness of their offspring indicates feebleness that is undesirable. If the hives are composed of movable frames, they can be easily inspected. Rheumatic persons should try their hands at beekeeping. It is generally conceded that the formic acid infused by bee stings is highly beneficial in curing this painful disease. Be cautious at first in the application of the remedy. An overdose may be more painful than the original disease.

A weak solution of carbolic acid and common salt is considered by some a specific for bee stings. Honey commands a good price and will be likely to do so until a new crop. Don't worry about the market being overstocked. Rather be anxious about getting enough honey to overstock it. Good honey will never spoil. The longer it is kept the better it gets. Whoever will become a Jay Gould in beekeeping must, like him, be prepared for emergencies. This is the secret of success in all pursuits.

The Coming Hog.

A member of the Michigan Swine Breeders' association said at a meeting of that organization:

I believe the coming hog will be black—white—red, with spots if you please, and we will put the spots just where we want them. He will be as well behaved as other domestic animals, and we will not require extra fencing on his account. He will be ready for market at any age and will give 200 pounds of dressed carcass at 8 months old. He will have all the good qualities of the Poland-China, the Chester White, the Victoria, the Essex, the Yorkshire, with the gentle disposition of the Duroc Jersey and the lean meat of the Berkshire.

In wood ashes is furnished one of the most serviceable manurial substances for peat or muck soils.

What a Veil Does.

A veil wonderfully enhances a beautiful face and helps out ugly or plain features. And our girls manage it with as much skill as a fan. How daintily one little birdie raises it to touch her thread lace toy handkerchief to her kissable lips or the tip of her little nosie wosie. It's a cute, cunning motion and shows off a small, well gloved hand to advantage. Women just dote on veils. And a black dotted veil or one of thin thread with small meshes does the most execution when a pretty face and irresistible eyes are beneath it. The heavy thread veil conceals complexion defects.—Washington
